The Reverend Dr. Brandon Thomas Crowley (pronounced kroh-lee) is an African American scholar in religion, theology, ecclesiology and queer theory. Dr. Crowley earned a PhD in Theology and Society and a Master of Sacred Theology from Boston University. His dissertation entitled “Inclusive Black Congregations and Black Ecclesial Queering” constructed a methodology to intentionally disrupt and dismantle oppressive forms of ecclesial and theological normalcy within Black churches. He also earned a Master of Divinity from Harvard University, and a Bachelor of Arts in Religion from Morehouse College in Atlanta, Georgia.

Since 2009, Dr. Crowley has served as the senior pastor of a thriving predominantly African-American suburban congregation in West Newton, Massachusetts, the Historic Myrtle Baptist Church. The congregation traces its founding back to 1874 when a formerly enslaved preacher, the Reverend Edmund Kelley, organized the church in response to the discrimination that Black christians faced in northern white churches.

Dr. Crowley was ordained in the Progressive National Baptist Convention of America, Inc. and in 2010, he was honored by his alma mater as the youngest inductee into the prestigious Morehouse College Board of Preachers. He has written for the African American Lectionary and presently Dr. Crowley is serving as an instructor in Ministry Studies at Harvard Divinity School and formerly he served as an adjunct professor in The History of Christianity at Meadville Lombard Theological School in Chicago, Illinois. As a religious leader in the Boston Metropolitan area, Dr. Crowley is committed to creatively and effectively addressing social and political issues like policing, affordable housing, and the intersectionality of needs amongst marginalized subgroups living in America.
The Reverend Dr. Brandon Thomas Crowley (pronounced kroh-lee) is an African American scholar in religion, theology, and ecclesiology. Reverend Crowley earned a PhD in Theology and Society and a Master of Sacred Theology from Boston University. His dissertation entitled “Inclusive Black Congregations” constructed a methodology to intentionally disrupt and dismantle oppressive forms of ecclesial and theological normalcy within Black churches. He also earned a Master of Divinity from Harvard University, and a Bachelor of Arts in Religion from Morehouse College in Atlanta, Georgia.

Since 2009, Reverend Crowley has served as the senior pastor of a thriving predominantly African-American suburban congregation in West Newton, Massachusetts, the Historic Myrtle Baptist Church. The congregation traces its founding back to 1874 when a formerly enslaved preacher, the Reverend Edmund Kelley, organized the church in response to the discrimination that Black christians faced in northern white churches.

Reverend Crowley was ordained in the Progressive National Baptist Convention of America, Inc. and in 2010, he was honored by his alma mater as the youngest inductee into the prestigious Morehouse College Board of Preachers. He has written for the African American Lectionary and presently Reverend Crowley is serving as an instructor in Ministry Studies at Harvard Divinity School and formerly he served as an adjunct professor in The History of Christianity at Meadville Lombard Theological School in Chicago, Illinois. As a religious leader in the Boston Metropolitan area, he is committed to creatively and effectively addressing social and political issues like policing, affordable housing, and the intersectionality of needs amongst marginalized subgroups living in America.